South Africa - Weather

The drier weather bias in Western Cape will promote generally favorable winter wheat maturation and harvesting

- o Recent rainfall was too late to significantly improve late season development
- o No major quality impacts were suspected
- o Drier weather earlier in the growing season has already reduced crop quality in a few locations, though yields should be near normal
- Free State's winter wheat areas may receive enough rain during the next two weeks to slow or delay maturation and harvesting, most notably in the east
- o Minor quality reductions possible in the wettest areas as well
- o However, yields should be near normal
- Eastern South Africa will continue to see the moisture profile improve during the next two weeks due to the frequent precipitation pattern
- o Planting and establishment conditions will improve in most areas. Planting is already behind normal due to the lack of rain in October, but most producers will continue to put a significant amount of crop in the ground in the coming days

United States of America - Weather

U.S. MIDWEST: The Midwest was mostly dry and warmer Wednesday, although temperatures were still well below normal. The two-week outlook has not changed much since Tuesday and good harvest progress should occur across Midwest as precipitation will be infrequent and mostly light with only one round of well-organized precipitation expected.

U.S. DELTA AND SOUTHEAST: Wednesday was much colder than normal and mostly dry across the Delta and the Southeast. The Delta and the Southeast will see good harvest progress overall through the next two weeks with some interruptions from rain, especially in the Southeast today into Saturday.

South America - Weather

BRAZIL: Welcome rain fell in and around Paraguay and in several southern and a few western Brazil locations Wednesday. Paraguay will become dry today while rain falls on many other areas in western, central, and southern Brazil before a pattern shift occurs and a welcome increase in rain takes place in the driest areas of north-central and northeastern Brazil Friday into next Thursday.

ARGENTINA: A few western Argentina locations received beneficial rain Wednesday with rain in some northern areas as well while much of the country was dry. Showers and thunderstorms will occur Friday into Tuesday from Cordoba and San Luis through the northern and eastern halves of Buenos Aires and nearby Entre Rios bringing enough rain to temporarily improve soil moisture in some areas while other areas do not receive enough rain to prevent drying and some increases in crop stress.

Europe, New Zealand and Australia - Weather

EUROPE: Moist conditions will continue to occur over northern portions of the Iberian Peninsula through France, the U.K., into the Netherlands as well as Italy into south Austria, Slovenia and eastern Adriatic Sea nations this week. The moisture will be greatest and most beneficial in portions of the Italian and westernmost Balkan Peninsula where dryness concerns have prevailed most of the fall although flooding may evolve from the heavy rainfall. However, pockets of drying will prevail over interior Balkan Nations, with the exception of some welcome moisture over western Bulgaria into southwest Romania today into Thursday.

AUSTRALIA: Mostly dry weather will continue the coming week. Long term dryness concerns remain over east-central Australia and significant follow up moisture will still be needed to relieve drought and continue to support cotton, corn, sorghum and other summer crops after a beneficial increase in moisture earlier this month.
