South Africa - Weather

The main coarse grain and oilseed production areas will generally see a good mix of rain and sunshine during the coming week. The rain will help bolster soil moisture or keep soil moisture near current levels in most locations. However, Limpopo will receive little to no rain and will gradually dry down. Crop establishment and growth will advance under generally favorable conditions outside Limpopo. However, additional rain will be needed to completely fix some of the dryness in Free State and North West. Prospects remain generally favorable for the corn, soybeans, sunseed, sorghum, and peanuts produced this time of year. Any winter wheat harvesting that is not yet complete may be sluggish at times. Western Cape and Northern Cape will receive little to no rain during the coming week. The lack of significant precipitation will be beneficial for aggressive winter wheat harvesting.

United States of America - Weather

U.S. MIDWEST: A restricted precipitation pattern will continue through the next ten days to two weeks and late-season fieldwork should advance well around the few rounds of organized precipitation expected.

U.S. DELTA AND SOUTHEAST: The Delta and the Southeast should see late-season fieldwork advance well overall during the next two weeks, although a few rounds of rain will occur and will cause temporary delays to farming activity.

o Today through Thursday will be mostly dry before rain increases in the Delta Friday into Saturday and in the Southeast Saturday into Monday.

o Rainfall totals in the Delta and the Southeast will be 0.20-1.0" and locally more with a few bands of 1.0-2.0" and locally more scattered across the region.

South America - Weather

BRAZIL: Much of Brazil and Paraguay will see a good mix of rain and sunshine through the next two weeks and production potentials should rise in most areas, but dryness earlier this season in parts of Mato Grosso, southern Goias, western Parana, and Paraguay likely stressed crops enough that a full restoration of yield potentials is not possible especially for early planted crops.

ARGENTINA: Southern and portions of western Argentina will see little rain through the next two weeks and fieldwork should advance well while stress to crops likely increases and may soon become serious if rain does not increase soon. Outside of rain in Buenos Aires Thursday, most areas will be dry through Thursday before showers and thunderstorms increase in central and northern areas Friday through Sunday with another round of rain favoring the same region occurring Monday into next Tuesday.

Europe, New Zealand and Australia - Weather

EUROPE: Rounds of precipitation will continue to increase over western and southern Europe during the coming week. In the meantime, restricted precipitation will occur over Poland, the Czech Republic and northeastern Germany. Moisture will be greatest in southern Europe through the middle of the week, but will increase over west-central and northwestern Europe Friday into Monday.

AUSTRALIA: Rain and clouds will increase over east-central Australia Thursday into next Monday. Temperatures will trend cooler than the recent extreme heat over east-central Australia and some relief to crop stress will occur. In the meantime, the rain showers and thunderstorms will also bring some relief, but a greater soaking of rain will still be needed to "significantly" restore soil moisture and reduce crop stress.
