South Africa - Weather

Western Cape will have a few opportunities for light rain this week while most other locations are dry. Winter wheat planting and establishment conditions will remain mostly favorable in Western Cape due to recent rainfall. Free State and neighboring production areas will otherwise remain too dry for ideal winter wheat conditions. • Much of South Africa will be drier than normal this week. Western Cape and southern Eastern Cape and Natal will have a few opportunities for light rain, though resulting rainfall will be lost to evaporation
• Southern and eastern South Africa will have opportunities for rain June 1 – 7 while most other locations remain drier than normal

United States of America - Weather

U.S. MIDWEST: Most of the Midwest will see a good mix of rain and sunshine during the next two weeks and planting should advance well on many areas with the southwestern Corn Belt remaining too wet for aggressive fieldwork while significant rain will fall on the driest areas in and around Iowa and southern Minnesota. East-central and northeastern South Dakota and eastern North Dakota into northwestern Minnesota will have opportunities for rain Wednesday night into Thursday with some light rain Saturday and little additional rain until possibly the June 5-7 period.

U.S. DELTA AND SOUTHEAST: Dry weather will be most common through the next two weeks in the Delta and the Southeast and planting should advance swiftly around the rain that does fall while the driest areas from southern Georgia and nearby Florida to southern Virginia likely see rising levels of crop stress.

o Temperatures will reach the upper 90s with a few lower 100s this week from southern Georgia into portions of South Carolina and southeastern North Carolina causing rapid drying and increases in crop stress.

South America - Weather

BRAZIL: Second season corn areas from Paraguay and west-central Mato Grosso do Sul through Parana and southern Sao Paulo will benefit from another round of rain Wednesday through next Monday with rain extending into far southern Brazil as well as central and southern Minas Gerais. Northern Mato Grosso do Sul into Mato Grosso and Goias will miss much of the rain this week and stress to corn should steadily rise in areas that missed out on rain during the past weekend while areas that did benefit from rain will see crop stress increase as that moisture is lost to evaporation.

ARGENTINA: A drier-biased weather pattern will occur in Argentina through the next two weeks and conditions for fieldwork will steadily improve and harvesting should soon become aggressive. Totally dry weather is not expected and Corrientes will receive rain Thursday into Friday with totals of 0.50-1.50" and locally more and some lighter rain in the south.

Europe, New Zealand and Australia - Weather

EUROPE: Waves of regular rain will occur from the U.K. and northeastern France through Germany, southern Scandinavia, Poland, the Czech Republic and Slovakia this week. Fieldwork will be sluggish, especially in areas from the U.K. through Germany, southern Scandinavia as well as Poland where locations are already quite wet. Heavy precipitation will occur from northern Italy and into southwestern Austria and Slovenia today into Tuesday and may return this weekend. Some welcome drying will occur in southwestern and central France.

AUSTRALIA: Scattered showers will move through southeastern Australia today into Wednesday. The moisture will be welcome, but will be brief and light. Greater rain will still be needed to support planting of winter crops in South Australia, northern Victoria into western New South Wales. Otherwise, mostly dry weather will occur over eastern Australia production areas the next ten days to two weeks and overall net drying will occur from South Australia and Victoria into New South Wales and Queensland.
