South Africa - Weather

SOUTH AFRICA: Eastern and central South Africa will see a good mix of rain and sunshine this week. Rainfall will help keep soil moisture rated adequately in most production areas. Coarse grain, oilseed, cotton, and other crop development conditions will remain favorable. Any wheat harvesting that is not yet finished in Free State will advance swiftly around the rain. Late-season wheat harvesting in western South Africa will continue with few disruptions.

- Eastern and central South Africa will see a mix of rain and sunshine this week
- o The first round of rain will evolve late today into Tuesday as a disturbance passes over the region
- o Scattered showers will evolve on a frequent basis later this week and weekend as well
- o Moisture totals by next Monday morning will range from 0.75-3.00" with local amounts over 4.00" in Natal and Mpumalanga
- o Drier pockets are also expected in Free State and North West

United States of America - Weather

U.S. MIDWEST: Restricted precipitation is expected this week allowing late season fieldwork to advance. Temperatures will also trend warmer and that should bring on more wheat emergence and establishment

U.S. DELTA AND SOUTHEAST: Late season fieldwork will slowly end in the next few weeks. Weather conditions in the next ten days will be mostly good for harvesting of late season crops and for protecting unharvested crop conditions. The period will also be good for wheat emergence and establishment with a little late season planting expected as well.

South America - Weather

BRAZIL: Timely rainfall is predicted for most of Brazil's grain, oilseed cotton rice, and soft commodity production areas during the coming two weeks. Alternating periods of rain and sunshine are expected with seasonable temperatures. There may be a little concern about long term soil moisture in Rio Grande do Sul and a few areas in both Mato Grosso and Goias. The concern will stay low unless rainfall is missed or temperatures turn hotter. Rain in eastern Mato Grosso during the weekend helped ease prolonged dryness, but much more rain was needed before worry over rainfall in the region completely diminishes.

ARGENTINA: Much of Argentina was dry Thursday and fieldwork should have advanced well while rain fell on a few southern locations. Dry weather and good planting progress will be most common through the next two weeks with one round of rain Saturday into Monday not likely great to keep some crops from becoming stressed later this month if follow-up rain does not occur soon. Showers may increase Nov. 29-Dec. 1, but confidence for this event is low and a close watch on this period will be made.

Europe, New Zealand and Australia - Weather

EUROPE: Significant precipitation is expected in southern production areas, particularly Italy the Balkan Countries, in the first week of the outlook. This will be good for notably increasing topsoil moisture, but could lead to some flooding. Rain fell lightly from the United Kingdom, Netherlands and Belgium through France and part of western and southern Germany to Italy and the Balkan Countries. Moisture totals were not more than 0.75 inch in the U.K. and 0.72 inch in western France while most of the precipitation was not more than 0.60 inch. Many areas reported 0.30 inch or less.

AUSTRALIA: Net drying is expected in a majority of the region the next seven days. Near to below average temperatures will continue to dominate the weather pattern; however, some warming is expected later this week. The environment will be generally favorable for fieldwork and crop development. A rain event in eastern production areas Nov. 28 – 29 could lead to more delays.
