South Africa - Weather

SOUTH AFRICA: Periodic rain is still slated for portions of crop country in South Africa through the middle of next week. Resulting rainfall will be too light to significantly slow or delay the harvest and fieldwork. No quality impacts are expected as well. The main winter wheat areas would otherwise benefit from a good shot of rain to support ideal establishment and growth. The eastern half of South Africa will have a few opportunities for erratic rainfall during the coming week o A weak disturbance will generate light rain through Friday o A frontal boundary will also produce light rain this weekend and early next week o Natal and Mpumalanga will receive 0.25-1.00° of rain with locally greater amounts by next Wednesday morning o Most other locations will receive 0.10-0.50° of moisture
Western South Africa will be drier biased during the coming week o Any rain that occurs will be lost to evaporation
South Africa will have a few opportunities for rain May 11 – 17 o Precipitation will favor southern and eastern South Africa

United States of America - Weather

U.S. MIDWEST: The best conditions for fieldwork during the next two weeks from the western Corn Belt into Illinois and western Kentucky will occur during the next two to three days while a large part of the remainder of the eastern Corn Belt will see good conditions for planting through Tuesday before regular rain falls May 10-14. O Eastern Nebraska and southeastern South Dakota into western lowa will largely benefit from rain during the next two weeks as much of the region still has significant soil moisture deficits.

U.S. DELTA: The Delta and the Southeast should see good planting progress and mostly dry weather into Thursday before regular rounds of rain Friday through Thursday of next week slow fieldwork in much of the region. O The Delta to Alabama and northern Georgia will be wettest Friday through Sunday while rain in most of the remainder of the Southeast should be light enough that some planting should occur soon after the rain. 3 Western into southern North Carolina and northern South

Europe, New Zealand and Australia - Weather

EUROPE: More frosts and freezes are likely in northeastern Europe this weekend. Most crops should be fine; however, additional damage to fruit trees is still a possibility, particularly in Poland and some nearby areas. Rain in the first week of the outlook will be mostly favorable. Spain and Portugal continue to be too dry. Some shower activity will occur in these two countries which will be good, but much more rain will be needed. AUSTRALIA: Rain in the first week of the outlook will be limited mainly to southern production areas which will be good for winter crops. Dryness in Queensland and northern New South Wales will be beneficial for aggressive fieldwork advancement. Rain expected in Western Australia will be very important and quite welcome since interior parts of the state are still dry.
